A temporary viaduot has been built over the tracks at the foot of Van Buren street and it is crowded with teams hauling material for filling the lake.

The old trestles on which the original tracks of the Illinois Central we laid disappeared after the great fire of 1871, when the debris was thrown into the lake. In excavating for the depres-sion of the tracks the workmen find all kinds of relics of Chicago's cremation but so far nothing more valuable than table knife, picked up by Officer Berfill, who is kept more than busy in pre-centing interested spectators from trespassing on the railroad property in the vicinity of the old trestle. But he is used to dealing with the public, having been in charge of the Van Buren street station during the world's fair, where one day alone he had a crowd of 20,000 During the many years he has been employed by the company he has saved many persons from injurn,
